

The legal requirements in relation to the handling of personal data will change on 25 May 2018. On this date, the General Data Protection Regulation ("GDPR") will come into effect, replacing the Data Protection Act 1998 (the "DPA").

The requirements of the GDPR are different to those of the DPA, and all businesses need to update their contracts to reflect this change in data protection legislation. The changes are designed to improve the transparency with which personal data is managed and to enable individuals to have more visibility and control of their personal data.

Additional contractual terms, which reflect the requirements of the GDPR, are attached to this letter at Annex A.
